Adenosine Therapeutics (AT), located in Charlottesville, VA, is a drug discovery and development company that was co-founded in 1999 by University of Virginia (UVA) Professor, Joel Linden and entrepreneur, Robert Capon (one of three cofounders of Virologic, NASDAQ: VLGC.) Although relatively young as a company, AT represents the fruition of over 40 years of academic research at UVA on the pharmacology and physiology of the endogenous nucleoside, adenosine. UVA's establishment as the academic leader in adenosine research began with the work of Dr. Robert Berne in the 1960s. This led to the patent, clinical development, and successful marketing of the anti-arrhythmic, Adenocard®, a staple in ambulances and paramedic kits.
