The Critical Path Institute (C-Path) is an independent, publicly funded, non-profit organization dedicated to the critical path initiative. C-Path fosters research and educational programs intended to enable the pharmaceutical industry to safely accelerate the development of new medications. C-Path has three founding partners: The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA)

The University of Arizona (UA)

SRI International (SRI)

Each partner contributes unique strengths to C-Path. UA provides the academic home and infrastructure for C-Path's educational and research programs and an environment of innovation and inquiry. The participating FDA scientists provide the first-hand knowledge of the regulatory process, a wealth of experience in the evaluation of new pharmaceutical agents and awareness of opportunities for improvement. SRI brings practical experience in pharmaceutical development, scientific expertise, and a track record of commercializing new medical products
