Mackichan Software, Inc. (pronounced "ma-KEE-kun") is a small software development company with a tradition of fine products for scientific publishing. In 1981, we incorporated in New Mexico as Triad Computing, Inc. We released the T3 word processor, a landmark DOS product, in 1984. The company was renamed a year later as TCI Software Research, Inc. In 1988 we began working to develop a scientific word processor that incorporates the beautiful typesetting produced by LaTeX with the ease of entering mathematics using natural mathematical notation. We announced Scientific Word in 1992. In 1993, we retained our name but sold the company to Brooks/Cole Publishing, a division of International Thomson Publishing. In 1994, we announced Scientific WorkPlace, which combines the capabilities of Scientific Word with built-in computational capability. 1996 saw the unveiling of Scientific Notebook, which provides computational capability within attractive documents for users who don't need typesetting capability. In 1998, Triad Computing co-founder Barry MacKichan and Lynda MacKichan repurchased the assets and renamed the company as MacKichan Software, Inc. We now have offices in Poulsbo, Washington, and in Las Cruces, New Mexico.
